Activity: Learn about your riding

Understanding which riding you live in is an important step in getting involved in the election process. It helps you learn who your local Member of Parliament (MP) is and what candidates are running in your area. Here's how you can find that information:

1. Visit elections.ca and search for the "Voter Information Service" tool.
2. Or, go directly to the Voter Information Service page to search your riding by entering your postal code.
3. Take time to learn about your riding:
   Who currently represents your area in Parliament? What are the boundaries of your electoral district?
   Write down what you discover in the space provided.
4. Ask your friends or family members for their postal codes or addresses.
   Look up their ridings too, and explore how different areas are represented across Canada.
